TIME, TENSE AND ASPECT & VERBS OF STATE AND EVENTS

Tense is a term that refers to the way verbs change their form in order to indicate at which time a situation occurs or an event takes place. For finite verb phrases, English has just one inflectional form to express time, namely the past tense marker (-ed for regular verbs). Therefore, in English there is just a contrast between present and past tense. Needless to say, non-finite verb phrases (to infinitives and -ing forms) are not marked for tense. When occurring with modals, verb phrases are used in their base form, with no tense marker. Each tense can have a simple form as well as be combined with either the progressive or perfective aspect, or with both of them:

I work; I'm working; I have worked; I have been working (present)

I worked; I was working; I had worked; I had been working (past)

Time and tense are not overlapping concepts. Though tense is related to time, there is no one-to-one correspondence between the two. Tense is a grammatical category: rather than with “reality”, it has to do with how events are placed, seen, and referred to along the past-present-future time line.

Thus, a present tense does not always refer to present time, not a past tense to past time. Actually, the present and past tenses can refer to all three segments of the time line (past, present, and future).

For example, the present tense may be used to speak about a future event (often, but not necessarily, accompanied by a future time adverbial), while the so-called “historic present” – frequently used to convey dramatic immediacy – refers to the past as if it were happening now:

The World Cup starts next week

*Hear what happened to me the other day. The boss comes in my office and says:
'You're fired!'...*

By the same token, a past tense can refer to present time. This occurs, for instance, in hypothetical sentences, in reported speech, as well as in other structures:

If I had more money, I would buy a new car

Did you tell him you were/are busy?

It's time you changed your car

Furthermore, the past tense can express tentativeness, often associated with politeness:

Did you want to make a phone call?

Were you looking for me?

Aspect is a grammatical category that reflects the perspective from which an action/situation is seen: as complete, in progress, having duration, beginning, ending, or being repeated. English has two aspects, progressive (also called continuous) and perfective. Verbs that are not marked for aspect (the majority of them are not) are said to have simple aspect.

In British English, the perfective aspect is much more common than in American English, since Americans often use the past simple where Britons use the present perfect.

Verb phrases can be marked for both aspects at the same time (the perfect progressive, however, is infrequent). The following combinations are possible:

present progressive; past progressive; present perfective; past perfective; present perfective progressive; past perfective progressive:

He's sleeping; He was sleeping

He has slept; He had slept

He has been sleeping; He had been sleeping

Usually, grammars contrast the progressive with the perfective aspect (and the simple, for that matter) on the basis that the former refers to an action/event as in progress, while the latter tends to indicate the completeness of an action, to see actions and events as a whole and a situation as permanent. This is certainly a useful distinction, which will not be questioned here; yet students must be aware that the above is an oversimplified view, as is demonstrated by the fact that the two aspects can combine within a single verb phrase.

Progressive aspect

The progressive aspect, either in the present or past tense, generally refers to an action/event (usually of limited duration) in progress at a particular time, to an uncompleted activity, to a temporary state of affairs or a temporary habit.

The present progressive is formed by the present tense of the verb be + the -ing form of the lexical verb, the past progressive by was/were + the -ing form of the lexical verb:

I'm going to bed very late these days

We're studying German this year

I was sleeping when I hear a strange noise

I was living in Buenos Aires at the time.

The activity may also not be, strictly speaking, continuous, that is to say it may refer to a series of individual acts:

Some of the demonstrators are smashing shop windows

Needless to say, the progressive aspect does not reflect the length of an action, but the speaker's view of a certain event. Though aspect and the duration of an action are somehow related – in fact, to describe an event lasting only a short time the simple aspect is more frequently used – the simple aspect is not reserved for short actions nor is the progressive used exclusively to talk about events lasting for a (fairly) long time.

As we have seen above, the progressive aspect can combine with the perfective aspect, both present and past, as well as with a modal or a modal and a perfective together. Finally, the infinitive can also be used in the progressive:

You must be kidding

He must have been joking

It's too early to be sleeping

Normally, only so-called dynamic verbs are used in the progressive, while stative verbs are found in the simple aspect. Yet, there is no one-to-one relationship between dynamic verbs and progressive aspect or between stative verbs and simple aspect: as we shall see later on, stative verbs can sometimes occur in the progressive – when, for instance, they refer to a situation which extends over time but is not permanent – while some dynamic verbs – those referring to actions taking a very short time – usually occur in the simple form. Indeed, the difference between stative and dynamic verbs is not so clear-cut as is often thought to be, and thus deserves to be examined in some detail. Such difference is better conceived in terms of a continuum, and it would be more correct to talk about the stative or dynamic senses in which a verb is used, though the traditional distinction between stative and dynamic verbs is undoubtedly convenient (provided it is not applied in a simplistic way).

Stative verbs are verbs of “being”. Since they refer to “states”, they are normally used with the simple aspect. On the contrary, dynamic verbs are verbs of “doing”, they refer to activities, events and processes. They can occur in both the simple and the progressive aspects, depending on the meaning speakers wish to convey. The first of the following sentences refers to a habitual, repeated action, the latter to an action in progress at the time of speaking:

I work on Saturday morning

I'm working now

In general, two elements determine if a verb is frequently or rarely found in the progressive aspect: the length of the action described by the verb and the status of the subject as either agent or experiencer. The progressive form is common in clauses that have a human agent as subject and refer to an action, event, state or situation which last for a substantial period of time; contrariwise, verbs that are rarely used in the progressive form describe temporary states of short duration or actions that take place very quickly.

Stative verbs indicate possession and describe thoughts, beliefs, feelings, wishes, preferences, perceptions of the senses, as well as states of being. Verbs that typically occur with stative senses are:

- 1) verbs of perception, such as: appear, feel, hear, see, seem, smell, sound and taste;
- 2) verbs that refers to mental, emotional and cognitive states, such as: adore, assume, believe, care, consider, desire, detest, dislike, doubt, envy, expect, fear, find (meaning “consider”), forget, forgive, guess, hate, hear (meaning “to be told”), hope, imagine, intend, know, like, love, mean, mind, notice, prefer, realize, recall, recognize, refuse, regard, regret, remember, see (meaning “understand”), want, wish, wonder;
- 3) verbs that contain the idea of “being” and “having”, that refer to situations which cannot easily be imagined as having a time limitation: be, have (meaning “possess”), belong, compare (meaning “be similar to”), concern, consist, contain, cost, depend, deserve, differ, equal, exist, fit, hold, include, interest, involve, lack, matter, measure, need, owe, own, possess, remain, require, resemble, suit.

Some examples of verbs normally used in stative senses:

It just seems strange to me

I detest football

The police intend to prosecute him

Of course I recall our first meeting!

The whole estate belongs to him

I'm afraid this will involve plenty of paperwork

It surely matters how you spend our money!

I owe you a favour

We think we deserve some reward for our work

My opinion on the issue of genetically-modified food does not differ from yours

The progressive aspect is unacceptable with stative verbs describing qualities – i.e. (relatively) permanent and inalienable characteristics/properties of the subject referent – as different from states, which refer to less permanent situations and thus can occur in the progressive:

*They own a beautiful country house / They are owning a beautiful country house

*She has wonderful eyes / She's having wonderful eyes

I'm hoping they will reconsider their decision

I'm forgetting all I have learnt at school

I was wondering if I did the right thing

Verbs referring to sensory perceptions are usually preceded by can/could. However, they can also be used in the progressive, when emphasis is put on the process of perception:

I can hear you

I could feel the difference

There's no need to shout. I'm hearing you!

I'm not seeing well with these new glasses

The deliberate acts corresponding to the involuntary sensory reactions indicated by hear and see are expressed through the verbs listen and look. On the contrary, feel, smell and taste refer to both voluntary action and involuntary perception. Needless to say, verbs referring to voluntary actions can be found in the continuous form:

I (can) hear what they say; I'm listening to what they are saying

I (can) see her; I'm looking at her

I felt / could feel a hand touching my shoulder; I'm feeling the quality of the leather

I (can) smell gas; She's smelling the flowers

I (can) taste cinnamon in the cake; He's tasting the custard

When they refer to a temporary condition, verbs describing bodily sensation can be used in both the simple and progressive form with hardly any difference in meaning:

My knee aches badly; My knee is aching badly

I feel tired; I'm feeling tired

As we have already stated, dynamic verbs indicate activities, they do not describe events as a whole. They can occur in both the progressive and non-progressive form. They include verbs indicating a temporary situation (for example cook, jog, live, read, study, work):

I was living in New York at that time

I'm making a cake

Some dynamic verbs are punctual, i.e. they refer to events that have very little duration, and thus they generally occur in the simple aspect. Examples of punctual verbs are break, close, hit, jump, knock, nod, and tap. When used in the progressive, they often indicate the repetition of an action:

They were jumping in with excitement

Someone's knocking at the door.

Perfective aspect

The perfective aspect is used to refer to a state or action which has taken place before the time of speaking, as well as to a state or action (or series of actions) occurring in a period of time we imagine as continuing until the present or until a certain moment in the past (until now or until then), or that has just ended. Remember: the events and situations referred to by the perfective aspect have some relevance to the time of speaking (the present in the case of the present perfective, the past in the case of the past perfective, the future in the case of the future perfective). The perfective aspect is also used to indicate the completeness of an action, to see events as a whole:

I have tidied my room

I've often spent my holidays in South America

She had just found a solution to the problem

The present perfective is formed by have/has + past participle, the past perfective (statistically less common than the present) by had + past participle, while the future perfective by will have + past participle:

I have had the same car for twelve years! It's time to get a new one

I had lived in Paris for two years when I decided to come back home

We will have been together for ten years next month

The perfective aspect can combine with the progressive aspect, with a modal or with a modal and a progressive together (examples of the first and third combination are also provided above); perfect infinitives are also to be found:

I've been running

He had been watching TV all day

You should have done this more carefully

He must have been kidding

They seem to have liked the film

Note that the perfect progressive aspect indicates the possible incompleteness of an action. In the following examples, it is not clear whether the action has been completed or not:

I've been repairing my bike (I may or may not have finished repairing the bike)

They have been cleaning their room for hours (they may or may not have finished cleaning)

USE OF MODALS

These different sentences written in both active voice and passive voice illustrate the differences.

‘IF’ CONDITIONALS

First conditional

Nature: Open condition, what is said in the condition is possible.

Time: This condition refers either to present or to future time.

e.g. If he is late, we will have to go without him.

If my mother knows about this, we are in serious trouble.

Form: if + Simple Present, will-Future

Example: If I find her address, I'll send her an invitation.

Second conditional

Nature: unreal (impossible) or improbable situations.

Time: present; the TENSE is past, but we are talking about the present, now.

e.g. If I knew her name, I would tell you.

If I were you, I would tell my father.

Compare: If I become president, I will change the social security system. (Said by a presidential candidate)

If I became president, I would change the social security system. (Said by a schoolboy: improbable)

If we win this match, we are qualified for the semifinals.

If I won a million pounds, I would stop teaching. (improbable)

Form: if + Simple Past, Conditional I (= would + Infinitive)

Example: If I found her address, I would send her an invitation.

Third conditional

Nature: unreal

Time: Past (so we are talking about a situation that was not so in the past.)
e.g. If you had warned me, I would not have told your father about that party. (But you didn't, and I have).

Form: if + Past Perfect, Conditional II (= would + have + Past Participle)

Example: If I had found her address, I would have sent her an invitation.

USE OF PHRASAL VERBS

Phrasal verbs are usually two-word phrases consisting of verb + adverb or verb + preposition. Think of them as you would any other English vocabulary. Study them as you come across them, rather than trying to memorize many at once. Use the list below as a reference guide when you find an expression that you don't recognize. The examples will help you understand the meanings. If you think of each phrasal verb as a separate verb with a specific meaning, you will be able to remember it more easily. Like many other verbs, phrasal verbs often have more than one meaning.

The Sounds of English

In the English alphabet we find 26 letters. However when we tend to pronounce the English these letters won't help. For that reason the IPA (International Phonetic Alphabet) was introduced to make it easier for the non-native speakers to pronounce English words with its original pronunciation with no mother tongue interference. Please find the chart and the examples below for your use.

English Vowels

There are twelve vowel sounds in English. They are also called monophthongs. A monophthong (Greek monóphthongos from mónos "single" and phthóngos "sound") is a pure vowel sound, one whose articulation at both beginning and end is relatively fixed, and which does not glide up or down towards a new position of articulation. In English we have two variants of vowels i.e. short vowels and long vowels. The short vowels take a shorter duration of time to be pronounced whereas the long vowels take longer duration.

DIPHTHONGS

A diphthong is a sound made by combining two vowels, specifically when it starts as one vowel sound and goes to another, like the oy sound in oil. Diphthong comes from the Greek word diphthongos which means "having two sounds." Notice the di- for "double." So diphthongs are double vowel sounds in words like late, ride, or pout. If two vowels in a row are the same, as in boot or beer, then it's not a diphthong. Linguists, scholars who study language, analyze diphthongs, which differ from language to language. Ironically, the word diphthong has no diphthongs.

Iə here	eɪ wait
ʊə tourist	ɔɪ boy	əʊ show
eə hair	aɪ my	aʊ cow

English Consonants

A consonant is a speech sound that is not a vowel. It also refers to letters of the alphabet that represent those sounds: Z, B, T, G, and H are all consonants.

Consonants are all the non-vowel sounds, or their corresponding letters: A, E, I, O, U and sometimes Y are not consonants. In hat, H and T are consonants. Consonant can also be an adjective that describes things that seem like they should go together, things that are "agreeable." You could say a nation's offer of aid is consonant with their treaties. When you hear consonant sounds in music, they are pleasing, the opposite of "dissonant" sounds which are harsh.

EQUIVALENTS

/s, z, ʃ, h, p, t, k, b, d, g, tʃ, dʒ, m, n, l, j, r/.

DIFFICULTIES

- 1 /f/ and /p/ are confused, /p/ being used for both.
- 2 /θ/ and /ð/ are replaced by dental stops, which causes confusion with /t/ and /d/.
- 3 /z/ is sometimes replaced by /dʒ/ or /dz/.
- 4 /ʒ/ and /z/ are confused, /z/ (or sometimes /dʒ/ or /dz/) being used for both.
- 5 /t/ and /d/ are made with the extreme edge of the tongue-tip

- 6 /p, t, k/ are often made with no aspiration even though the aspirated consonants occur in Hindi; this may cause confusion with /b, d, g/.
- 7 /ŋ/ may occur in final position, but between vowels it is always replaced by /ŋg/.

/w/ and /v/ are confused, an intermediate sound being used for both.

/r/ is often like the English sound in initial position, but elsewhere is a tongue-tip trill or tap.

Final consonants are often followed by /ə/ when they should not be, causing confusion between e.g. bit and bitter.

Problem sounds- vowels

DIFFICULTIES

- 1 /e/ is replaced by either /æ/ or /eɪ/.
- 2 /ɑ:, ɒ, ɔ:/ are confused.
- 3 /ɜ:/ is replaced by /ʌ/+ Hindi /r/.
- 4 /ə/ in final position is often a shortened form of /ɑ:/, and in all
- 5 /eɪ/ is replaced by the non-diphthongal vowel in Hindi rel 'train', and as this vowel is often quite short it may be confused with English /e/.
- 6 /əʊ/ is replaced by the non-diphthongal vowel in Hindi log 'people'.
- 7 /ɪə, eə, uə/ are replaced by /i:ʌr, eʌr, u:ʌr/.

SYLLABLE

It's a sound unit. It is analyzed in terms of its segments (consonants & vowels) which are called speech sounds. The vowel forms the nucleus or the central part. A syllable is a group of one or more sounds. The essential part of a syllable is a vowel sound (v). Some syllables are just one vowel sound. A syllable can have consonant sounds (C) before the V after the V or before and after the V.

For example the word CAT has a CVC (consonant Vowel Consonant) structure.

CV	VC	CVC
GO	IF	CLAP

MY	EGG	HOPE
KNOW	ICE	MOUTH

Consonant cluster

A syllable must have a vowel, and zero, one or more than one consonant before the vowel or after it. When a sequence of two or more consonants occurs either before or after a vowel in a single syllable, it is known as a 'consonant cluster'.

Example

Play	pl-
Clear	kl-
Spin	sp-
Past	-st
Tent	-nt

Minimal pairs

A minimal pair is a group of words that differ from each other in one sound. However this difference brings out a change in meaning.

Example:

Sip	Ship
Said	Shed
Race	raise

ENGLISH WORDS & STRESS

STRESS in English word are fixed ,i.e., the stress always falls on a particular syllable (first,second,third or so)in a given word.

The syllable on which the pitch movement is initiated is said to have the primary stress/accent. the syllable which has primary stress becomes tonic syllable ,any other syllable is said to have the secondary stress/accent. Primary accent is marked with a vertical bar(|)above & in front of the syllable to which it refers.secondary stress is marked with a vertical bar below & in front of the syllable.

Exp: after 'noon

RULES OF WORD STRESS-

1. Words with weak prefixes are stressed on the root

a ^ˈ rise	be ^ˈ low
a ^ˈ lone	be ^ˈ come
a ^ˈ loud	be ^ˈ fall
ad ^ˈ mit	be ^ˈ tween
a ^ˈ mount	be ^ˈ gin

a ▪ part	be ▪ hold
a ▪ float	be ▪ lieve
a ▪ ccept	be ▪ side
a ▪ bove	com ▪ pose
A ▪ bout	De ▪ velop

2. PREFIXES with negative connotations get stressed

`dis'loyal	`insincere
i'llogical	'half-'finished

3. VERBS of two syllable beginning with the prefix dis- are stressed on the last syllable.

dis'arm	dis'may
Dis'band	dis'pel
dis'solve	dis'turb
dis'tress	dis'guise
dis'close	dis'count

4. VERBS of two syllable ending in -ate, -ise/ize, -ct are stressed on the last syllable.

-ATE	-IZE
nar'rate	cap'size
mi'grate	bap'tize
de'bate	-CT
lo'cate	at'tarct
pul'sate	de'pict

5. WORDS ending in –ion have the stress on the penultimate(i.e.last but one) syllable.

Application	Civilization
Com'position	Conversation
Cul-ti-'va-tion	Examination
Qualification	Introduction

6. WORDS ENDING in –ic,-ical,ically,-ian have the stress on the syllable preceding the suffix

Apologetic	Electric
Sympa'thetic	Official
Scientific	Presidential
-ical	Industrial
Apolo'getical	Special
-ically	Residential
Apolo'getically	Ceremonial
-ial	Essential
Memorial	-ian Victorian

7. WORDS ending in –ious,-eous have the stress on the last but one syllable

-ious	-eous
Anxious	Piteous
Industrious	Courageous
Industrious	Courageous

Sentence stress

Sentence stress provides rhythm in connected speech. All words have their own stress in isolation, but when they are connected into a sentence, content words are stressed, and function words aren't; sense groups (i.e., logically connected groups of words) are singled out by pauses and intonation; the stressed syllables occur at regular intervals and are usually higher in pitch than the unstressed syllables; the unstressed syllables are blended into a stream of sounds between the stressed syllables; emphatic stress may be used in the sentence to single out the most important word; the last stressed word in the sentence gets the strongest stress with the help of a fall or a rise.

Primary Stress/ Secondary Stress

In longer English words, there may be more than one prominent syllable. In such words, one syllable may have the main emphasis or stress called primary stress, whereas the other syllable may have a weak stress called secondary stress.

Word	Primary stress	Secondary stress
Possibility	3 rd bl	1 st po
Departmental	3 rd ment	1 st de
Information	3 rd ma	1 st in
Photograph	1 st pho	3 rd graph
Beautify	1 st beau	3 rd fy chronological	3 rd lo	1 st chron

Stress timed vs. Syllable timed

A stress-timed language is a language where the stressed syllables are said at approximately regular intervals, and unstressed syllables shorten to fit this rhythm. Stress-timed languages can be compared with syllable-timed ones, where each syllable takes roughly the same amount of time. English and German are examples of stress-timed languages, while Spanish and Japanese are syllable-timed.

Example: The baby became quiet after feeding from the bottle.

1 2 3 4 5

In the above sentence the stressed words are marked 1,2,3.. . For a native speaker of English the time taken to reach from 1 to 2 , 2 to 3 will always be same regardless of the unstressed words between the stressed words.

Syllable-timed languages

A syllable-timed language is a language whose syllables take approximately equal amounts of time to pronounce. It can be compared with a stress-timed language, where there is approximately the same amount of time between stressed syllables. Learners whose first language can be described as syllable-timed often have problems recognising and then producing features of English such as contractions, main and secondary stress, and elision. French is described as a syllable-timed language, English as a stress-timed one.

Contrastive Stress

When stress is shifted(from its regular position in a sentence) to put emphasis on a particular aspect we know it as contrastive stress.

1. Joan is leaving for Moscow to attend a conference next week. (when)
2. Joan is leaving for Moscow to attend a conference next week. (where)
3. Joan is leaving for Moscow to attend a conference next week. (not a pleasure trip)
4. Joan is leaving for Moscow to attend a conference next week. (its true)
5. Joan is leaving for Moscow to attend a conference next week. (not someone else)

Weak forms

Certain very common words, such as articles, personal and relative pronouns, auxiliary verb forms, prepositions and conjunctions usually have two pronunciations, a strong pronunciation and a weak pronunciation. Weak pronunciation is used in connected speech. Strong pronunciation is used when the word is stressed or spoken in isolation, and also when the word comes at the end of a sentence. Find the table below for your use.

prepositions	At, for, from, of, to articles	A, an, the
Conjunctions	And ,as, than, that, but
Auxiliary verbs	Is, am, are, was, were, does, can, has, have, shall, will, would, must

English is a non-tonal language

English is a non-tonal language. Thus it sounds very different from tone languages such as Chinese or Vietnamese. In tone languages pitch is used to distinguish word meaning. So a word said with high pitch may have a different meaning than the same word said with a low pitch. In English pitch is used to emphasize or express emotion, not to give a different word meaning to the sound.

Intonation

Intonation is based on several key components, such as pitch, sentence stress, and rhythm.

- Intonation performs several important functions in English.
- The first function is uniting separate words into sentences in oral speech.
- The second function of intonation is distinguishing between types of sentences (i.e., statements, questions, commands, requests, exclamations).
- And Also, intonation allows us to express various emotions: finality, confidence, interest, surprise, doubt, joy, pain, irony, etc.

Pitch

Determined by the frequency of the vibration of vocal cords i.e. the no. of times they open & close in a second.

The falling tune

Fall in the pitch of the voice from a high level to low level.

The rising tune`

Rise in the pitch of the voice from a low level to high level.

The falling tune

1. Ordinary statements made without any implications.

I liked it very `much

It was quite `good.

2. Questions beginning with question-word such as what, why etc, when said in a neutral way.

Who were you `talking to?

What's the `matter?

3. Commands

Take it `away.

`Have them

4. Question tags when the speaker expects the listener to agree with him

It's pleasant today, `isn't it?

It was a good film, `wasn't it?

The Rising Tone

1. Incomplete sentences.

It's seven o'clock (she hasn't got up)

2. Polarity type questions which demand a yes/no answer.

Are they /coming?

3. Polite requests.

Go and open the /window.

Take it /away.

4. Question tags when speaker gives his listener to disagree with him.

You aren't a gardener, /are you?
